Benjamin Kearney, Ph.D. Executive Vice President & Chief Clinical Officer

Benjamin W. Kearney, Ph.D. is Executive Vice President and Chief Clinical Officer at OhioGuidestone.

Ben received his Bachelor's degree from Oberlin College and his doctorate from Cleveland State University. He also completed post-doctoral work in psycho-pharmacology at Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale-Davie, Florida. In 1993, Ben began working for OhioGuidestone as a ProKids & Families program case manager. Since then, Ben has held many noteworthy roles at OhioGuidestone including Home-Based Family Treatment therapist and supervisor, and Assistant Director and Director of Central Intake and Assessment. He is also a licensed Psychologist and a Professional Clinical Counselor. Ben has been instrumental in advocating for our clients' behavioral and mental health concerns, and he has provided a multitude of trainings on child and adolescent behavioral and mental health related topics to raise awareness and understanding on a local and state level.

Among his many other accomplishments, in 2004 he received the Cleveland State University College of Education Distinguished Alumni Award, and in 2005, at the request of the Ohio Department of Mental Health and Ohio's Voices for Children, he published "Helping Ohio's Children: Understanding the Impact of Early Childhood Mental Health Services," an analysis of the strengths and challenges in Ohio's early child mental health system. Actively involved in the community, Ben is an adjunct professor at Cleveland State University and serves as a mental health consultant for both private and community mental health agencies throughout Ohio and Michigan.

Ben lives in Elyria, Ohio and enjoys spending time with family, traveling, photography, and his two dogs.
